WEEKLY BULLETIN

ROTARY JUNIOR COMMUNITY AWARD

This week It was the turn of Fairhills Primary School Students. Their first year of completing the program. They were wonderful! Lead by teacher Ebony Waldron (she blazed the trail for a fantastic first year for the school). Rotarians were thrilled to hear that Fairhills are intending to participate again next year. (See page 4 for more photos)

Skills Attempt: won by Graham Faulkner who drew the jack of spades

PROGRAMME: The speaker was Mark Carthew who is an author of children's books with 125 books to his credit, Mark is a multifunctional person, in addition to being an author he is a primary school teacher with a Ph.D., a playwright a songwriter and a musician. He gave us a most entertaining and animated talk on his passion for writing children's books, many of which he does in collaboration with illustrators (loves working with other artistic people) and enjoys playing with words.

Engaged the audience by having Paul McA and Virginia, and Fran and Mike entertain us by reading from some of his works. He wrote his first book at age 3, believes he acquired his passion for books by growing up in a family that loved books. However he made the point that despite his passion and enthusiasm for what he does it's a tough, tough industry to make a quid.

Meeting Closed at 8.30 pm or thereabouts.

ROTARY JUNIOR COMMUNITY AWARD

Once again, club members gathered with parents, teachers and students—this time at Fairhills Primary School. This was the first time we had the privilege of distributing the certificates awarded to those students who had successfully completed the program. The students all did well but special thanks must go to Ebony Waldron without whose efforts the program would not have gotten off the ground.

Well done everyone!

FELLOWSHIP—WEEKEND IN BRIGHT

The weekend of 6-9 December saw 11 of us travel to beautiful Bright, for a few days of fun, fellowship, food and frothy drinks.

There was: Mike S, John & Anne F, Paul & Jill W, Paul & Kay Mc, Rob & Marg H and Brian M and I.

Mike had very kindly arranged accommodation for us all at the Bright Resort, where we had 3 very comfortable 2-bedroom villas in a kind of a triangle, with a barbecue and seating area in the middle.

Friday night saw us all enjoying a barbecue dinner of snags, burgers and salads, all washed down with loads of plonk, and accompanied by much hilarity, corny jokes and friendly insults - as you always have with people you love !!!

Saturday morning came, the sky was blue and the sun was shining. A bit chilly, but very nice. This time we sat down to a bbq breakfast Canadian style, consisting of eggs, bacon, hash browns, pancakes and maple syrup, with coffee and tea flowing freely.

Some of us ventured to Mount Beauty, where we were promised "25 exciting market stalls of diverse items." Well, someone couldn't count - unless they included the 12 tables containing plants being sold by the same vendor - as there were certainly less than 25, to say the least! Still, a few of us capitulated and bought stuff we probably didn't need, just for the sake of it.

We then adjourned to a bakery/café where we tried very hard to enjoy our coffee and tea, but were driven away by the incessant hordes of flies that kept surrounding us.

These same intrepid travellers then visited Bogong village and marvelled at the gorgeous trees, the rushing water and the general beauty of the place.

Saturday night we ventured into town for a counter meal, which was good value indeed, followed by more fellowship in a villa until Bob H decided to produce the usb that now houses his one million country and western songs. A rather heated argument followed, disputing some opinions as to who is the best singer of Me and Bobby Magee (Janis Joplin, of course !!!) so, to bed we went.

Sunday found a much warmer morning, the cicadas going mad rubbing their bits together (argument that morning over which bits!). Another bbq breakfast but this time without the pancakes.

A few went off to explore Beechworth, Kay and Paul visited some "outlaws" who live in the area, and in the afternoon, the rest of us went to the brewery (of course) where there was a band playing. There the others met up with us and we all had a jolly good time !

Unfortunately Bri and I had to leave Sunday afternoon; the others stayed on for another night and returned on Monday so as to be in attendance at the Fairhills Primary RJC awards.

All in all, it was a thoroughly enjoyable weekend, with great company, lovely weather and much needed R & R. I know I for one came home feeling the benefits such a short break can bring.

So, look out for the next one, which we hope will be over the Australia Day weekend in January 2014, at Phillip Island. We are also planning it to be the President's picnic for Phil.

Some can be accommodated at my holiday house and I am going to see if Mick Bench would allow the use of his house there if it is not taken at that time. Alternatively, there is other accommodation, but for those contemplating a motel, etc., I would suggest you get in early with your booking.

I realise it is the Masters sausage sizzle that Saturday, but that shouldn't stop us from getting together at the Island after that, and enjoying a couple of days there.
